

Succubi and Incubi: Infernal Messengers of Desire

Posted on June 27, 2025 by Rhyan Hyroc

To step into the Infernal Court of Lilith is to enter a living domain where desire is neither a shameful instinct nor an indulgence to be repressed. Here, desire is sacred current, a spiritual force that opens gates between realms and selves. Within this nocturnal empire, Lilith does not walk alone. She rules alongside countless spirits of seduction and power—among them, the succubi and incubi. These beings are not myths, metaphors, or psychological projections. They are real spirits. They act, initiate, transform.

They are the emissaries of the Queen of Night.

Nature and Purpose of Succubi and Incubi

Succubi and incubi are erotic spirits that dwell within the infernal current of Lilith's domain. They exist to awaken, initiate, and challenge those who dare to work with the energy of pleasure, influence, and shadow. These spirits are not creations of the mind, but entities with their own forms, movements, and expressions.

In the grimoires of Naamah, Eisheth Zenunim, and Agrat bat Mahlat, their presence is constant. They are described as sensual agents who deliver pleasure, stir deep longings, and bring the seeker face-to-face with their hidden desires. Through them, one confronts the truth about their own hunger—its beauty, its danger, and its spiritual potential.

They do not merely arrive to tempt. They arrive to reveal.

Signs of Contact and Presence

Most initiates first encounter these spirits through dreams, sensations during trance, or the sudden emergence of erotic thoughts during meditation. Contact is often unmistakable:

- A dream of intimacy that lingers in the body after waking.
- A sudden awareness of being touched or held in sleep.
- The feeling of another presence during self-pleasure or deep solitude.
- A voice, whisper, or image appearing during erotic energy work.

These spirits do not rely on form alone. They are energy, vibration, influence. When present, the room may change in temperature. A scent may arise—amber, myrrh, roses, or something dark and unfamiliar. The body may respond before the mind understands.

Their aim is not to shock. Their aim is to stir.

Their Loyalty to Lilith

No succubus or incubus within the Infernal Court operates outside Lilith's sovereignty. They are loyal to her law, and they reflect her values: autonomy, desire, power, and shadow. Lilith is not their origin as a physical mother, but as an energetic queen. Through her, they are bound to a greater order—one that does not punish pleasure but sanctifies it.

Each erotic spirit in her court moves with purpose. Some awaken the body. Others test the mind. Some linger, guiding the initiate night after night. Others deliver one message and vanish. But all of them answer to her.

This court does not allow chaos without meaning. Erotic fire without consciousness is not part of their path. The succubi and incubi of Lilith's court are not here to drain. They are here to demand awareness of how power moves through the erotic field.

Erotic Energy and the Infernal Current

From the Naamah Grimoire, we learn that seduction is not manipulation, but magnetic truth. Naamah herself governs spells of glamour and sensual influence, and the spirits that walk beside her—including succubi—teach this art through presence and vibration. A succubus may approach not to offer pleasure immediately, but to teach one how to become pleasure—how to radiate allure, confidence, and erotic truth.

Eisheth Zenunim's spirits specialize in devouring shame. Through her current, some succubi and incubi operate as shadows, confronting the initiate with past trauma or suppressed sexual history—not to harm, but to liberate. They enter through dream, memory, or erotic confession, allowing healing through confrontation.

Agrat bat Mahlat's erotic spirits often carry madness, trance, and deep arousal. They may teach through overwhelming sensation, sudden desire, or spiritual eroticism that blurs boundaries between the sacred and profane. They are masters of trance, voices in the dark who teach how to lose control and still find the Self.

These are not abstract teachings. The spirits of the court transmit them directly—through dream, breath, voice, scent, movement, and erotic heat.

Common Spirit Behaviors in the Infernal Court

Verified through decades of magical practice and spirit work, these are common ways succubi and incubi operate:

- Dream Visitations: Most contact begins at night. The initiate may dream of being approached, kissed, touched, or possessed. These dreams are not fantasies—they are doorways. Repeated visits suggest a spirit is claiming interest.

- Energetic Possession During Pleasure: During moments of arousal, spirits may temporarily merge with the practitioner's energy body. This is felt as sudden intensity, loss of control, or sensations of "another" participating.
 - Teaching Through Erotic Imagery: A succubus may appear visually or sensually during ritual to demonstrate movements, breathing, or words that amplify seduction or magnetism.
 - Challenges and Shadow Work: Some spirits test. They mirror your projections, magnify your shame, or awaken memories. They do not do this to cause harm, but to prepare you for greater power.
-

Succubi and Incubi Are Not Gender Roles

There is no mention in the verified grimoires of gender assignments beyond functional tradition. Succubi have been described in female forms, incubi in male. However, the spirits of Lilith's court are not limited by human gender or binary identity. Their forms are chosen for impact, not identity.

What matters is not how they look, but what they awaken.

Some may appear as masculine, yet carry soothing sensual currents. Others may present feminine, but embody raw, dominant intensity. These spirits reveal the fluidity of power, lust, and presence.

They do not belong to our categories. They shape themselves according to our needs, fears, and desires.

What They Offer to the Initiate

The succubi and incubi of Lilith's Infernal Court offer the following to initiates who work with respect and commitment:

- Awakening of Erotic Energy: They stir dormant sexual and spiritual power, especially in those wounded by repression or trauma.
 - Training in Magnetism: Many spirits teach how to walk with glamour, speak with charisma, and draw attention through aura alone.
 - Reinforcement of Boundaries: Contrary to belief, they often enforce limits. They may vanish if disrespected, or amplify discomfort when the initiate overreaches. This teaches responsibility.
 - Spiritual Protection in Erotic Work: Once bonded, they can protect during dream states, rituals, or astral travel—keeping hostile spirits at bay.
 - Reclamation of Erotic Identity: Above all, they return to the initiate what was stolen by shame—ownership of their body, pleasure, desire, and erotic truth.
-

Closing Gateways, Ending Contact

Just as these spirits enter through respect, they withdraw with equal clarity. If at any time the initiate feels overwhelmed, confused, or disturbed, the following actions are honored by the spirits of the court:

- Speak aloud: “This contact is closed.”
- Wash the body in saltwater or cold shower.
- Burn sandalwood or lavender.
- Avoid sexual rituals for 3 days.

Succubi and Incubi: Infernal Messengers of Desire

- Repeat a grounding mantra or walk barefoot on earth.

The succubi and incubi of Lilith's court do not linger where they are not welcome. They are erotic—but they are bound by Lilith's order. Consent, awareness, and respect are the pillars of their world.